

UNSEEN SCARS:THE HUMAN FACE OF CONGO IN WAR

This photographic essay explores the political instability in Africa through the ongoing war in the Democratic Republic of Congo. What began as a struggle over power and resources has spiraled into one of the world's longest and deadliest conflicts. Beyond the headlines, this essay gives voice to those most affected the ordinary men, women, and children who wake up each day amidst uncertainty. Through these images, I hope to reflect the resilience, pain, and untold stories of Congo's people and call for greater awareness of Africa's broader fight for political stability and justice.
